

Paint Up Your Home Now, Pay Later

Now that it's paint-up time again, you doubtless have plans to improve your house, both inside and out. As you know, painting is the best possible way to give your property that fresh new look, and it is now easier than ever to undertake major home painting projects and pay for them out of your monthly income.

It is surprising, however, that comparatively few homeowners are aware of this fact. A recent survey showed that only about 20 per cent of the people interviewed knew that painting jobs could be paid for on a deferred plan.

It's a simple matter to make such payment arrangements. A most convenient way is through F.H.A.'s Title I. Under this provision the Federal Housing Administration insures home improvement loans made by banks, savings and loan companies or other approved financial institutions. Such loans may run as high as $3,500. The money may be paid to the borrower or to approved dealers and contractors. In other words, your financial aid comes either directly to you from your lending agency, or to your paint dealer or painting contractor.

So, whether you plan an extensive or moderate repainting project for your home, it's wise to contact your paint dealer and painting contractor at once.
